Description
Pair of rare glasses by Salvador Dali for DAUM France, Chalice.
Technique: Pate de Verre
Many of the pieces of the Daum collection have their origin in the summers of his childhood in Cadaqués: summers that Dali spent exploring the different shades of colors and the transparency of the Mediterranean Sea, or collecting pieces of colored glass smoothed by salt and rhythmic rhythm of the waves. His first glass sculpture was in fact inspired by an abandoned object that Dalí found on the beach; an empty plastic bottle that was transformed into the beautiful piece L'Important c'est la rose.
